A Big Cut—Passage of a Train Through the Grand Canon.

The actual passing of the passenger train through the Grand Canon and Rio Grande, on the line of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad of Colorado, was briefly mentioned in the American last week. The Denver Tribune contains a glowing description of the passing of the train through the Grand Canon, and the following is a copy of the article.

The excursion started from Denver, but received accessions at other points along the route. On reaching the canon the engine was placed in the rear, so as to give a better view to the tourists. The approach to the canon is gradual. The distance from the city to the mouth of the Valley of the Arkansas is nearly 100 miles. The valley is a narrow, winding gorge, and the river is a narrow, winding stream. The gorge is a narrow, winding gorge, and the river is a narrow, winding stream. LOCAL MATTERS.

SERIOUS TROUBLE.—A COLORED MAN STRUCK AND A WHITE MAN KNOCKED DOWN.—Saturday evening about 10 o'clock a serious difficulty occurred between B. J. Ware (white) and Lewis Jackson (colored) near the Hixson Mills blacksmith-shop. Ware is from Reldville, N. C., and is employed as brakeman on the Richmond and Danville railroad. He came into the city Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. A young friend, Mr. C. C. Moore, also an employee of the Danville road, met with him about 5 o'clock Saturday evening, and seeing his condition, persuaded him to go along with him to Manchester, to get in a car to sleep.

Near the blacksmith-shop, where Moore and Ware were walking along arm-in-arm, they met Lewis Jackson. Ware said, "Hello!" Jackson answered, "Hello!" and they went on their way. Moore and Ware were walking along arm-in-arm, and they met Lewis Jackson. Ware said, "Hello!" Jackson answered, "Hello!" and they went on their way.

Thereupon Ware broke loose from Moore and rushed upon Jackson, and cut him with a pocket-knife in the face and on the leg. Jackson got away from him, and picked up a cobblestone and struck him on the left cheek, knocking him senseless, in which condition he remained for some minutes. Moore, who was perfectly sober, says that Ware had no other provocation, and that he attacked upon Jackson what is above mentioned. He is under the impression that Ware had in his hand his knife, with blade open, when they met. Moore says that Jackson never had a knife in his hand, but that he was armed with a pocket-knife.

The Police Court will investigate the case this morning. Sergeant Perrin and Officer Charter arrested all three of the parties. Jackson was sent to the almshouse. His wounds are not considered dangerous. Ware was released on a $1000 bond. Moore was released on a $1000 bond. The Police Court will investigate the case this morning.

ROBBERS AT WORK IN THE WEST.—On Lombardy street, the western boundary of the Richmond-College grounds, between Broad and Franklin, are three houses, all of which were visited by burglars on Friday night. The third house was robbed of a watch and a pocket-knife.

THE BERNDON MATINEE.—A large audience greeted this talented artist at Mozart Hall Saturday afternoon. The performance was fully up to the standard of the Tuesday evening, and being called before the curtain to receive the merited applause of her auditors, Miss Herndon favored them with two humorous selections that quite carried the young folks away. Miss Herndon is one of the very few actresses who can control and seem to hold a large assemblage spell-bound. It is very difficult for one person to successfully give a performance of two hours' duration and centre the attention. This Miss Herndon succeeds in doing; therefore success. The programme embraced many of the best dramatic and comic plays, and the most notable was the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet. By request of a prominent clergyman present, the "Chorus" from London Assurance was given, and enjoyed by all.
